

MacroMarkets to launch exchange-traded securities benchmarked to U.S. Home Prices

June 11, 2008 Madison, NJ. –

MacroShares Housing Depositor, a subsidiary of MacroMarkets LLC, filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission for exchange-traded securities that will allow investors to invest in the upward and the inverse movement of U.S. home prices. MacroShares Major Metro Housing Up and Down securities will be based on the S&P/Case-Shiller Composite-10 Home Price Index and will allow investors to access this important, but illiquid, asset class. When launched, these revolutionary paired securities will have a ten-year term and will feature a 2x (200%) leverage factor.

MacroMarkets LLC plans to launch the new securities on the NYSE Arca under the ticker symbols:

- UMM – MacroShares Major Metro Housing Up
- DMM – MacroShares Major Metro Housing Down

MacroMarkets currently manages over $1.4 Billion in assets and averages combined trading volume of 6.2 million shares in its MacroShares product line.

Sam Masucci, MacroMarkets President and CEO, noted, “We are very excited to apply our patented MacroShares technology to the U.S. residential real estate market. Housing has a capitalization value of approximately $22 trillion, making it one of the largest, unsecuritized asset classes in the world. MacroShares were originally conceived to provide access to large illiquid assets like housing. The capital markets need a way to access or hedge residential property through exchange-traded products, and MacroMarkets is leading the way.”

MacroShares Major Metro Housing will be based on the S&P/Case-Shiller Composite-10 Home Price Index, which is a nationally recognized gauge for U.S. home prices and is followed closely by both institutions and the media. The Composite-10 is a weighted measure of home price changes in the following metropolitan areas:

- Boston
- Chicago
- Denver
- Las Vegas
- Los Angeles
- Miami
- New York
- San Diego
- San Francisco
- Washington, DC

Robert Shiller, renowned economist and MacroMarkets’ co-founder commented, “MacroShares Major Metro Housing enables investors the unique ability to gain exposure to the price movement of home prices, a commodity that greatly affects both institutions and individual investors.”
